Carrot Top creates comic craziness

Comedian's two-hour performance consists of impressions, inventions

by Genell Pavelich
The BG News

Carrot Top, a nationally known comedian, entertained nearly 1,000 students in a packed Kobacker Hall Tuesday night. The performance was sponsored by the University Activities Organization.

His performance was attended by 973 people, said Julie Gallo, director of performing arts for UAO.

The BG News/Beth Matters

Carrot Top, whose real name is Scott Thompson, performed for close to two hours. His show had a combination of jokes, inventions and impressions.

He had five different trunks full of his own inventions that he brought out to entertain the crowd.

The last part of his performance included a music number with a number of impressions including Mick Jagger, Axl Rose, Michael Jackson, Willie Nelson and Steven Tyler.

Of all the impressions, Carrot Top said he enjoys doing Mick Jagger the most.

"I love the Rolling Stones. During that part of the show I really feel like I am Mick Jagger," Thompson said.

"Tonight was a lot of fun. You cannot fake that -- the energy has to be there," Thompson said. "The crowd was really up to night."

Carrot Top first began in comedy when he was in college. He had many influences on his career including Jonathan Winters.

"A lot of people influence me."

There is not a comic that does not make me laugh," Thompson said. "I learn from them all."

Thompson, 28, has been performing for the past four years. He has been on a variety of television shows, but he still said he enjoys the college performances the most.

"With the college shows, you have more freedom to do things. You cannot go nuts on other shows," Thompson said. "With the live college show you do not have to worry as much about what you do or say."

UAO decided to get Carrot Top to come to the University because he is very popular with college students, said Jodie Castanza, president of UAO.

"He was extremely popular in a lot of different schools and we thought it would be a great opportunity," Castanza said.

Tickets for the show, which were $5, sold out very quickly, Castanza said.

"We had a great response to Carrot Top's performance. The tickets sold out in three and a half days," Castanza said.

Public access channel suggested Few classes use new technology in Olscamp Hall

by Cynthia Kent
The BG News

Internships and job opportunities could be open to University students if Bowling Green creates a cable public access station, Mike Peslikis, of the University's College of Arts and Sciences, said last night.

A public access channel would give University students "hands on production" or even fund a graduate internship, Peslikis said.

"Our cable company could contribute its share by providing a studio, or a program coordinator," Peslikis said. He also suggests that the campus television station, WBGU, help with staffing or provide studio room.

University alumnus Thomas Cicirelli said Bowling Green is a very good resource to staff a public access channel.

"We have a college looking for resume material," Cicirelli said. "The University is now requiring internships and it is very difficult to find good experience anywhere else."

The public access channel would cover community events such as high school and college sports, as well as provide local news broadcasts.

"[The public access channel] will help the community more than anything."

When the $13.5 million, two-story, 95,000 square-foot Olscamp Hall was dedicated last month it was hailed as a state-of-the-art building that would help bring the University into the 21st century. For the moment, however, most of the classes in Olscamp Hall could be taught in any University class building.

University President and Olscamp Hall's namesake Paul J. Olscamp said very few classes being offered currently utilize the new technological abilities of the hall.

"I'm not sure if there are any classes being offered this semester that fully take advantage of the hall's capabilities," Olscamp said. "But that's to be expected. It's going to take everyone a while to learn how to utilize this building."

Another concern is the mechanical breakdowns which have taken place in the hall. Problems have included difficulties showing the first University Activities Organization movie of the semester and the inconsistency of the building's air conditioning.

"These are natural problems with a building just starting up," Olscamp said. "We still have some kinks to work out, but it's nothing serious."

The classes being taught at Olscamp Hall this semester represent a wide array of University offerings, including courses in history, education and ethnic studies.

Lester Barber, executive assistant to the president, said after technology classes to be taught in Olscamp Hall are filled, other classes are assigned to the hall on a random basis.

"It has been the policy of the University to offer a broad range of classes in Olscamp after the ones that need the technology are filled," Barber said. "That way the hall doesn't become the turf of one department."

Problems with Olscamp Hall

- ✓ University President Paul J. Olscamp said very few classes being offered currently utilize the new technological abilities of the hall.
- ✓ Problems with mechanical breakdowns have become a concern.
- ✓ The classes being taught at Olscamp Hall represent a wide array of diverse offerings.

Eloise Clark, vice president for academic affairs, said the University has taken steps toward utilizing the technology offered in Olscamp Hall.

"Several classes in business and education are being taught to the Firelands campus with the technology in the Hall," Clark said.

"It will take time to utilize all the technology correctly," Olscamp said.

Ameritech may cut phone rates

Consumer groups have mixed reactions to company's deal

by Paul Souhrada
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Ameritech and the Ohio Consumers' Counsel announced an agreement Tuesday that would reduce regulations on new telecommunication services in exchange for $100 million in rate reductions and aid to schools.

The plan -- backed by consumer groups, the cities of Toledo, Cleveland and Columbus, and the Ohio Department of Education -- would free Ameritech from caps on earnings and allow it to move into emerging businesses, such as video conferencing, medical imaging technology and electronic publishing.

If the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio approves the deal, Ameritech would cut its rates by $84.4 million -- $55.3 million for residential PUCO.

The counsel is a watchdog agency that represents the interests of ratepayers in utility cases.

Ameritech Ohio President Jacqueline Woods said the proposal, which was to go to its first public hearing Tuesday night, will give Ohio a jump start in the telecommunications revolution.

"It's through new services and the marketing flexibility that Ameritech will be able to attract the investments we need to develop the information infrastructure in Ohio," Woods said.

Instead of waiting months or years to introduce a new service, under this proposal Ameritech would be able to move quickly into new areas -- and charge what the market dictates, she said. Ameritech said similar agreements are being considered in 33 states.

The PUCO would still oversee basic telephone rates to make sure local phone service does not subsidize new business ventures.

Ameritech also waived its rights to local phone monopolies, meaning other companies could hook into Ameritech's dial-tone service and compete for customers.

"With the change in the telecommunications environment, that will mean more services and more choices for Ohio consumers," Tongren said.

The Coalition for Customer Choice didn't think so.

"Ameritech's agreement not to assert an exclusive franchise right doesn't mean in any way, shape or form that competition is here," Rosenberg said. "They can still oppose applications for certification on other grounds."

customers -- over six years. The company also agreed to give $18 million to Ohio schools for long-distance learning programs and to set up public computer centers at 14 sites around Ohio.

Ameritech also agreed not to ask for a basic telephone rate increase for six years and accepted price caps on options such as call-waiting.

The announcement did not sit well with the Coalition for Customer Choice, however. The group representing cable television companies, long distance carriers, pay phone operators and other customers and competitors said Ameritech should have cut rates steeply and immediately.

"When they ask for a rate increase, they get it all at once," said Richard Rosenberg, a Columbus lawyer representing the coalition.

USG 'Union' plan overzealous idea

Undergraduate Student Government held an emergency meeting Monday to revise its budget after its successful retreat this past weekend.

One of USG's major reasons for the emergency meeting was to make sure the 11 committee chairpersons could work on dividing up its money.

In addition, USG formed a new committee called the Union Advisory Committee. Its main goal is to work on assistant vice president Greg DeCrane's extreme notion that USG can somehow get the University to build a new University Student Union.

That's as ridiculous as president Jen Mathe's belief that USG can get a parking garage built in front of the old University Student Union (on the presumption that a new union will be built).

USG's main purpose is to act as an advisory organization to voice student opinions to the proper campus organizations and administrations. As a result, the thought of building a new union is so unlikely that it makes USG look foolish when it can't even come close to fulfilling such lofty goals. These goals are so far away, that USG often overlooks the obvious.

What the Union Advisory Committee should be doing is not looking at building a new University Student Union, but rather working on improving the one already in place -- advising the proper administrators on the things that the students want in the union.

One of the most redeeming values of this new committee is USG senator Brian D'Aurelio's idea of bringing in a fast-food franchise. While this is not an original idea since schools like the University of Toledo, Eastern Michigan University, Kent State University, Youngstown State University and the University of Michigan have fast-food restaurants in their unions, it would be a novel idea for the University.

"Last night, I dreamt of a Big Mac and my food card," D'Aurelio said. "It made me smile."

Unfortunately, D'Aurelio's idea may stay just a dream as the University is highly unlikely to put a McDonald's in the union. McDonald's would offer students a decent meal at a much cheaper price perhaps causing a drop in Food Operation's revenues.

But at least a fast-food franchise is a worth-while idea to consider. It's not a parking garage or a new building, but it's something that a stagnant USG may actually pull off.

"HOLY COW, MISTER PRESIDENT, WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD WITHOUT AN ASSAULT WEAPON?!"

Students inspired by Webber's talk

At a recent impromptu gathering of several hundred University students, I was privileged to be involved in some mind-searching debate.

In the middle of all the hoopla was an evangelist perched atop a box which read "Jesus Saves." He wore a sandwich-board sign, which made the entire holy package look like some huge, unedible deli concoction. He was spitting divine know-how to anyone within earshot.

The man in question bore a warning upon his chest to all lesbians, thieves, abortionists, racists, astrologers, queers, pornographers and Mormons: if they didn't ask God for forgiveness, they were going to hell.

He handed out buttons to virgins as a reward for their abstinence. When someone asked an "intelligent" question, he had an Intelligent Question Whistle, which he blew at the crowd. If a gay person had something to say, he grabbed what he referred to as his Fag Whistle.

I found out later that his name was and is "Bible" Jim Webber. Some of the students in the crowd referred to him as "Jed II," among other things.

Students stood before him in a semi-circle, arms folded and faces intent.

Overall the group of young

adults was very well-behaved, especially considering the verbal abuse they were receiving.

He pointed to a young woman in the crowd who said she had engaged in sex. "Bible" Jim singled her out as a "fornicator" on her way to the judgment, guilty upon arrival, according to Webber.

Several students jumped up in her defense, but Webber stayed their attack by attacking their characters as well.

During a particularly heated exchange, a student dumped a large Pepsi over his head, presumably to cool him down a little.

Cheers went up from the crowd.

A few minutes later, the man who doused Webber returned with a Mountain Dew as a peace offering for the persistent evangelist, just to show that maybe his emotions got the best of him.

That was just one of the many valiant deeds I witnessed that day.

Webber had a particular hatred toward Mormons. His homophobia and ignorance of the goals of the larger gay community were obvious. He singled out young "promiscuous" women for his "Sex Before Marriage" sermon, not once ever mentioning male students. He used words like "whore" and "faggot," showing an obvious lack of intelligent things to say.

Through all of his outbursts and holy musings, the students listened. Most responded to him in some way, either by saying something to a friend standing near or by walking right up to Webber himself. He gladly took their questions and used his beat-up Bible as an all-encompassing resource.

Most of the students arguing with Webber had a working knowledge of the Bible themselves. They refused to be intimidated, and some even impressed "Bible" Jim.

Christian students pointed out a few things to Webber, displaying their own faith and beliefs.

Although he handled himself rather well, some of Webber's actions and words went too far.

Unfortunately, I had to leave for class.

I wondered to myself why men like "Bible" Jim Webber and "Brother" Jed come here when all they succeed in doing is interrupting the students' day.

They seem very concerned about the level of partying on our campus. I personally don't think they are going to curb this trend by preaching fire and brimstone.

I believe they simply fear our knowledge.

I think as crooked evangelists, they feed off of ignorant people who have to take their word for it because they don't know any better.

I salute any students, whatever their creed or denomination, who questioned "Bible" Jim's intentions.

If nothing else, these men force the students to gather together as a knowledgeable force.

They come to our campus and denounce our lifestyles, when in fact we are in the very process of bettering ourselves.

They'll be back -- sweating, stomping and waving the Good Book in the air.

Again, students will gather and question their reasoning. Amen.

Is Jesus a liar, a lunatic, or the Lord?

Yesterday at the Rec, with sweat rolling down my forehead, I was remarking to a friend of mine to never underestimate the power of one committed person to change the world.

Take a look, I stated in between panting breaths, at Martin Luther King, Gandhi, Thomas Paine or the greatest example -- Jesus Christ. To my amazement, he did not believe that Jesus Christ ever changed the world. He backed up his argument by saying why, he was only a man, a Jewish man for that matter, who died so long ago that his teachings do not matter anymore.

Now, with my collective brow raised, I ventured another question. "So, do you think that Jesus is a liar or a lunatic?" Neither, he replied. "Well then, the only option left is to accept that He is truly the Lord."

So the greatest question an individual will ever ask him or herself presents the most crucial Trilemma of mankind: Is Jesus Christ a Liar, a Lunatic, or the Lord of all? Let's take a careful look and find out this truth.

Was He a Liar? Jesus repeatedly staked the claim that He in fact was not only the Son of God, but God Himself. If he knew that He was not, then He was deliberately deceiving His followers.

Jason Wolfe

But if He was a liar, then He was also a hypocrite because He told others to be honest, whatever the cost, while He Himself lived a colossal lie. More than that, He was also a demon, for He told others to trust Him for their eternal destiny. If Jesus knew He could not back up His claims, then He was unspeakably evil.

Many people will say that Jesus was a great moral teacher. Let's be realistic. No great moral teacher goes around saying he is the Son of God if he isn't. A great moral teacher does not lie, especially about such serious issues.

However, this view does not coincide with what we know of Jesus, of His teachings and life. For Jesus has changed lives for good, nations have been changed for the better, thieves have been made honest, alcoholics have been cured, hateful individuals have become channels of love, and so on.

Jesus very life was about love and honesty. Someone who lived as Jesus did, taught what Jesus taught, and died as Jesus died could not have been a liar. But there are still two alternatives left to explore. Perhaps, Jesus honestly believed that He was God, but was mistaken. After all, it is possible to be sincere and wrong. But for someone to believe himself to be God and to tell others that their eternal destiny depended upon believing in him, is no light fantasy but the thoughts of a lunatic to the highest degree. Was Jesus Christ such a person?

Someone believing himself to be God sounds like someone believing himself to be Napoleon. He would be deluded and self-deceived and would probably be locked up so he would not hurt anyone. But we don't observe any of the abnormalities and imbalances in Jesus that usually go along with being deranged. His poise and composure would certainly be amazing if He were insane.

In light of other things we know about Jesus, it is hard to imagine that He was mentally disturbed. Here is a man who spoke the some of the most profound sayings ever recorded. His instincts have liberated many individuals from mental bondage. The skill and depth of His teachings support the case of His mental soundness.

So we are left with one option remaining, was He Lord? Logically thinking and researching this trilemma, I cannot personally conclude that Jesus was a liar or a lunatic. The only alternative left is He was the Christ, the Son of God, as He claimed.

The author C.S. Lewis puts it this way:

You can shut Him up for a fool, you can spit at Him and kill Him as a demon; or you can fall at his feet and call him Lord and God. But let us not come up with any patronizing nonsense about His being a great human teacher. He did not leave that option open to us. He did not intend to.

No question is of greater importance exists than this: who is Jesus Christ to you? Will you accept him as your personal Lord or reject all of his teachings?

All I ask is for you to seriously consider what you just read and search out the everlasting truth. For when we seek the truth, we shall find it.

Student shot on bus

DAYTON -- A handgun discharged on a city school bus, slightly wounding a 12-year-old boy, school officials said Tuesday.

The shooting occurred Monday as students from Cleveland Elementary School for the Arts were being taken home, said Jill Moberley, spokeswoman for Dayton public schools. No one else was injured.

School officials were investigating.

"We're still looking at what happened and talking to students," Moberley said.

Officials believe that the boy who was wounded had taken the gun onto the bus in a book bag and was showing it to a friend when the gun accidentally went off. The bullet grazed the boy's left leg, she said.

The gun was then thrown from the bus, Moberley said. Police later recovered a .22-caliber handgun.

The boy, a sixth-grader, was treated at Miami Valley Hospital and released, said Linda Harnish, hospital spokeswoman.

"Where are these kids getting these guns from?" Superintendent James Williams said. "These kids are not just popping guns out of the ground or making them."

Neither police, school nor hospital officials would identify the boy. The Dayton Daily News identified him as Wayne Boykin. There was no phone listing in the name at the address reported by the newspaper.

Greenpeace banner had toxic metals

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio -- The operator of a hazardous-waste incinerator says a banner seized from incinerator protesters contained toxic metals.

Greenpeace had unfurled the banner on a smokestack at the Waste Technologies Industries plant to oppose emissions of dioxin, which is suspected of causing cancer.

WTI's analysis of the banner showed 11 metals, all of them toxic in some degree, plant spokesman Raymond Wayne said Tuesday. He said the most serious were lead, chromium and barium.

"Greenpeace is not practicing what it preaches," said Norman T. Crabb, chief analytical chemist at the WTI plant along the Ohio River, near the borders with Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Greenpeace responded by saying paint is made with toxic materials.

"If paints were being made without toxic chemicals, then there would be no need for the protest," Greenpeace's Beth

Director's Week features international filmmakers

by John Riccardi
The BG News

An international film director who has worked with such stars as Cary Grant and Rock Hudson will start off the University's third International Film Director's Week in the Gish Film Theater Sunday Sept. 25 at 7:30 p.m.

International Film Director's Week features directors from across the world who have demonstrated outstanding achievement in film.

Each director will be available at least once during the week to screen one of their films and discuss their work. Screenings will take place at 7:30 p.m. in Gish Theater. Directors will also give seminars the day after their individual film screenings, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in 260 Memorial Hall.

Highlights from previous years have included a U.S. premiere of an international film and appearances by winners of the Cannes Film Festival. Henry Garrity, chairman of the department of romance languages at the University, said each year the program is unique because of the different directors it brings together.

Garrity said this year's program is unusual because it features a strong roster of American directors.

"This year we have a particularly strong lineup of American directors," he said. "We're very lucky to have Arthur Hiller, the president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences."

Sunday's guest speaker will be Academy Award-winning American film director Delbert Mann. Mann, who has worked with top box-office stars Cary Grant, Doris Day, James Garner and Rock Hudson, will speak with the audience following a screening Babe," starring John Goodman, on Thursday, Sept. 29. Hiller will also speak at the series conclusion Friday, Sept. 30, at the Toledo Art Museum. Hiller's film "Plaza Suite" will be shown at 7:00 p.m. at the museum.

All of the week's events are free and all are open to the public.

Garrity said International Film Director's Week is successful because of the variety of its films and directors.

"The strength of the program

Director Daniel Petrie will speak both Monday, Sept. 26, for the screening of his film, "Resurrection," and Tuesday, Sept. 27, for "Rocket Gibraltar." Petrie is best known for starting his ground-breaking career in 1961 with "Raisin in the Sun," starring Sidney Poitier.

Hungarian film director Istvan Szabo, who won best foreign film honors for his 1983 film "Mephisto," will be speaking Wednesday, Sept. 28, after a viewing of his film "Meeting Venus."

Hiller will be at the Gish Theater for a screening of "The has been due to it's diversity," he said. "We've had directors from Canada, France, Great Britain, Poland and Hungary -- and that will be the direction we will want to take [in the future]."

University students have the opportunity every spring to register for International Film Director's Week as a fall semester two credit-hour class.

Registered students are required not only to attend all of the events during the week, but must also attend a week-long session prior to the directors' arrival. The session includes viewing several films by the featured directors and writing response papers.

Wellness Center sponsors Women's Health Reception

by Cristl Ellwood
The BG News

In honor of National Women's Health Month, the Student Wellness Center is sponsoring the Women's Health Clinic Reception at the Health Center tonight. The reception will be followed by a slide show and speaker presentation on birth control.

The program, which is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., is designed to promote awareness and health issues that are unique to women, as well as contraceptive options.

There will be a general tour of the Health Center and refreshments will be served. Guests will be informed of the services the center provides, and it is hoped that this, in turn, will decrease the anxiety many female students have before they visit the center for the first time.

"Women who think ahead may be more likely to seek preventative health measures," said Jeanne Wright, health education director at the University.

She said she thinks there are more risks for women's health concerns, such as sexual assault, eating disorders and alcohol abuse. Wright urged women to seek preventative health measures before a situation arises.

"Seeking preventative health is a positive gesture towards protecting your own well-being," Wright said.

The slide show program is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. at the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the University Union, immediately following the reception. Barrier methods, as well as the different types of birth control pills and injectable contraceptives, will be discussed.

While these are options to prevent pregnancy, there is always the risk of getting a sexually transmitted disease, and directors of The Well want women to know their options before they act.

Jamie Boval, consultant at The Well, said he feels it is the responsibility of both partners to use contraception, and it is "not unreasonable for the female to buy condoms."

Concert series opens tonight

by John Riccardi
The BG News

The 1994-95 University Faculty Artist Series begins tonight at 8 p.m. in Bryan Recital Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Trombonist Paul Hunt, chairman of the performance studies department and professor of trombone in the College of Musical Arts, will give the first concert of the series. Hunt said he will be performing four light-toned works throughout the night.

"The theme for the evening is humor and music," Hunt said.

Selections will include "Quick n' Delicious," by Michael Angell; "Special," by Pierre Gabaye, with computer-generated accompaniment; "The Tales of Father Goose," written by Gyorgy Ranki and featuring assistance from members of the Black Swamp Brass; and "Henry Humbelton's Holiday," by Guy Woolfenden, with narration by Barbara Lockard-Zimmerman.

All of the faculty members in the series have a lot of talent, said Shawn Moorman, who works in the box office.

"They're all superb," he said. "These are professional musicians who've worked with professional groups in their field. They're all fabulous -- I don't think there's a weak professor here."

Although the College of Musical Arts has always had faculty recitals, it was named the Faculty Artist Series about six years ago to let the public know what it is about, according to Tina Bunce, manager of publicity for the College of Musical Arts.

There will be a total of 25 concerts on Sunday afternoons and Wednesday evenings this year, each featuring different faculty artists and resident ensembles, she added.

The next performance in the series will be Oct. 9 by pianist Jerome Rose in Kobacker Hall.

The college will spotlight Venti da Camera, a resident faculty woodwind quintet Oct. 26.

All performances are open to the public, and admission is free.

Ax-wielding woman arraigned

Local resident pleads not guilty to charge of felonious assault

by Aaron Epple
The BG News

A Bowling Green woman was arraigned last week for attacking her mother with a hatchet.

Mary Bradford, 43, 14592 Bishop St. pled 'not guilty' to a charge of felonious assault, a fourth degree felony.

Police were called to the scene on July 14, where they found Bradford standing next to the driveway. When the police addressed her, she reportedly said, "Why did mom malme do this?"

Myrtle Chambers, 67, the mother and victim of Bradford, was found standing at the front door with her left hand wrapped in a blood-soaked towel.

Chambers apparently saw Bradford using a hatchet to chop up a framed picture of her. Bradford then turned the weapon on her mother.

A further investigation of the house revealed a trail of blood leading to the phone in the den, and then to the kitchen sink where a bloody rag was found.

Bradford was taken into custody at the Wood County Justice Center.

As she was being driven away, she reportedly blurted out, "The ax is in the upstairs bath and I washed it."

Chambers was taken to Wood County Hospital.

"Her injuries were not serious," Alan Mayberry, the Wood County prosecutor said. "They just came from warding off the blows."

Mayberry and Gwen Howe-Gebers, the prosecutor in charge of the case, agree that Bradford's mental well-being might need to be addressed, although the nature of her problems are not known.

"Part of it has to do with her mental condition," Howe-Gebers said. "She just got mad at her mom and went off."

So far, no motions have been filed by her attorney, Scott Kuhn, regarding Bradford's competence to stand trial.

"She denies the charges in the indictment," Kuhn said.

Although standard procedure in an assault dictates that there be no contact between the two women until the case is resolved, Chambers has said she wishes to be able to speak with her daughter.

Bradford's husband has come back to live with her after an absence, and Chambers is no longer living with her.

Bradford is not allowed to have any weapons of any kind until the case is concluded, Common Pleas Court Judge Charles Kurfess said.

Bradford's pretrial conference will take place Oct. 11.

Chambers and Bradford could not be reached for comment.

Campus concern for safety rises in wake of attack

by Jim Vickers
The BG News

Campus safety is the shared responsibility of students and the campus police, according to a campus police official.

Barbara Waddell, the University's public safety information officer, said students must take precautions and make good decisions when considering their safety.

"Safety doesn't begin with law enforcement - it begins with the person," Waddell said. "We will never have enough manpower to patrol everywhere."

Concern for campus safety has increased following the Aug. 30 assault of a woman near the Education and Business Administration buildings. Waddell said the woman was walking by the buildings at 11:30 p.m. when she was attacked.

"The woman said she was grabbed from behind and saw a knife in the person's hand," Waddell said. "She was able to kick him in a sensitive area and beat him up before she took off."

Waddell said that although incidents like these are rare on campus, she urges students to be cautious when traveling across campus at night, and suggests using resources like the shuttle bus and the Campus Escort Service rather than walking alone.

Use of the escort service has increased this year, according to Heidi LeMasters, director of publicity and recruitment for the service.

"A lot more freshmen are using it this year," LeMasters said. "I think they may be stressing safety and the escort service more at freshman orientation."

LeMasters said she had heard about the assault and believes that this also has contributed to the increase in students using the service.

Students who wish to be escorted across campus should call the service and two escorts will be dispatched to accompany them to their destination.

Waddell said many students worry more about being violently attacked while walking on campus than being the victim of an acquaintance rape, which is much more common.

"Many times it's not the stranger in the bushes, it's the person downtown that you've been drinking with and go home with," Waddell said.

The number of acquaintance rapes reported at the University have stayed between two and four each year. However, Waddell said there are most likely more acquaintance rapes that aren't reported to the police.

Waddell said she advises students to be careful when drinking.

• Sunday a school official at Conneaut School, 542 Haskins Road, called police to investigate graffiti painted on the school. According to the police report, "symbols appear to be alphabet letters that are not made correctly." The report stated the words were "cow," "Davis," "ass" and "bitches."

• A North Grove resident called police Sunday to report a man who keeps ringing his buzzer and keeps asking for "Eric." Police said the man claimed he was looking for his friend. Police advised the bell ringer to quit ringing buzzers or he would be arrested.

• A woman reported to police that she was driving westbound on Clough Street Monday night when she saw a white male "standing next to the road ranting and raving." According to the police report "The next thing she knew he had opened the driver's side door and reached into [her] car." The woman reportedly pulled off the road, dragging the man down the street. She reportedly said he let go, and she last saw him lying on the road. Units were called to the area, but were unable to locate the man. Police told Wood County Hospital officials to call if anyone comes in with injuries consistent with being dragged by a car.

• A resident of the 500 block of Gypsy Lane called police Monday night to report an obscene phone call. According to the police report the caller said "Hi Barb, I want to f--- you." The resident said she did not recognize the voice and would contact the police if he called again.

• A resident of the 100 block of Troup Street called police to report a man who was sitting behind bushes near the house directly across the street from hers. The subject had reportedly been sitting there for a "little while" and had been smoking. When police arrived, they discovered he was actually on the porch and only looked like he was in the bushes from across the street.

• Police received a call Saturday night from a resident of Campbell Hill Apartments. She reported that someone entered her apartment and took some beer from the refrigerator. The report said the door was locked and there was no damage caused by the intruder. According to the police report, the resident's roommate reported that a rented video tape of "What's Eating Gilbert Grape" was missing.

• Monday a resident of the 700 block of Sixth Street told police she received a phone call from her roommate who accused her of stealing a $10 bill from the dining room of their apartment. According to the police report, the woman said her roommate sounded "intoxicated and was rather hysterical." The woman reportedly said her roommate then called her on Saturday and told her that she had "burned a blanket that was a family heirloom because she was mad." According to the report, when she returned home the woman said she found that her mail had been opened and the blanket was missing.

• Police were called to the 1400 block of Clough Street with a report that there was a male subject "throwing a girl around" in one of the apartments. According to the report, when police arrived all was quiet.

Storms prevent shuttle landing

Discovery's astronauts relax, take pictures, gaze at earth

by Mike Drago
The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston -- NASA aimed to bring Discovery home on one coast or the other after stormy Florida weather kept the shuttle's six astronauts in orbit for an 11th day.

The shuttle was scheduled to land today at Cape Canaveral, Fla., or Edwards Air Force Base in California. Thick storm clouds prevented a landing Monday.

Discovery had two opportunities to land today at Cape Canaveral, the first at 2:12 p.m. EDT. Forecasters, however, predicted more thunderstorms in Florida, increasing the likelihood of a mid-afternoon landing at Edwards Air Force Base. The forecast for California was good.

NASA prefers Florida to California because it costs $1 million and takes one week to ferry shuttles cross-country atop a jumbo jet.

Discovery's astronauts already had completed all their tasks, so there was nothing for them to do on the extra day but relax and gaze at Earth 150 miles below. They also took lots of photographs, including shots of two erupting volcanoes in New Guinea.

During the flight, a $25 million laser machine in the shuttle cargo bay bounced about 2 million light pulses off clouds for a study of global climate. The crew also released and later retrieved a satellite that focused its instruments on the sun's corona, or outer atmosphere.

Astronauts spent several days maneuvering an 82-foot boom in front of Discovery's steering jets to measure the damaging effects of shuttle exhaust. The information is needed before Atlantis docks with the Russian Mir space station next year.

The first untethered spacewalk in 10 years was conducted last week by astronauts Mark Lee and Carl Meade. The two took turns unhooking their lifelines to Discovery and trying out NASA's new $7 million jet pack.

Court rejects Apple lawsuit

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO -- Apple Computer Inc. doesn't have sole claim to computer screen symbols such as file folders and trash cans, an appeals court said in refusing to reinstate the company's $5.5 billion copyright lawsuit.

Apple claimed in 1988 that Microsoft's Windows and Hewlett-Packard's NewWave programs violated Apple's copyright for the screen display on its Macintosh personal computers. Both programs are widely used with IBM-compatible computers, Apple's rivals.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled 3-0 Monday that most of the screen display was covered by a 1985 licensing agreement from Apple that allowed Microsoft to continue marketing a similar product. Microsoft later granted the same rights to Hewlett-Packard.

The rest of the display consists mainly of symbols that are not protected by copyright law because they portray generic ideas or functional items, like a wastebasket that represents destruction of a computer file, the court said.

The display uses visual symbols rather than written commands to let the user enter the system and retrieve information.

Apple could appeal to a larger appellate panel or the Supreme Court, but that could be costly. The appeals court also ordered the judge to reconsider his rejection of requests by Microsoft and Hewlett-Packard for attorneys' fees. The companies estimated the fees at several million dollars.

Apple, based in Cupertino, Calif., has not decided on its next step, said spokeswoman Betty Taylor. She said the ruling was disappointing.

Teen moms stay in school

by Rich Harris
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Crystal Ledger is staying in class and learning to work with a computer, while her classmates are polishing their math and English skills.

They're taking part in an experimental state welfare program that pays teen-age mothers not to drop out.

Without the program, Ledger said Tuesday, "I'd be sitting at home."

"When you're in a public school, you have stress on you, because people make fun of you if you miss a word or people make fun of how you dress, how you act and stuff," Ledger said. Her children stay with an aunt while she is in school.

"Here, no one makes fun of you. They help you," she said.

Ledger, 19, and her classmates are part of the Learning, Education and Parenting, or LEAP, program. They receive $62 a month over their regular welfare benefits for continuing to work toward their high school diploma.

If they drop out or miss too many days, their benefits are cut by the same amount.

Young women in the program can stay in public schools and work toward their diploma, or work on a General Equivalency Diploma at privately operated centers. Ledger and her classmates attend the Gilbert School, a GED center run by a nonprofit social services agency under contract with Cuyahoga County.

A study released Tuesday found LEAP is having a small but significant impact on teen-age dropout rates.

There are 12,000 LEAP students in all of Ohio. The study found 21.1 percent of the 1,700 Cleveland students participating graduated or passed an equivalency test within three years, compared with 15.5 percent of students outside the program.

When the program reaches students before they drop out of school, the results were even more encouraging, researchers said. In those cases, 29.2 percent completed high school or earned their GED, compared with 20.4 percent for teens who did not participate.

"If it wasn't for the program, I wouldn't be in school right now," said Vickie Peters, eight months' pregnant and new to the program.

"I'd probably be sitting home, watching TV and cleaning the house," said Michelle Sprumelli, whose 2-year-old son is in day care a few blocks away.

The students at the Gilbert School sit at tables in a large classroom in a neighborhood on Cleveland's west side. One wall displays photos of the program participants and their children.

Testaverde rises in AFC ranking

by The Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio -- Despite throwing seven interceptions in his team's first three games, Cleveland Browns quarterback Vinny Testaverde says he hasn't lost his confidence.

"I'll take the blame for everything if I have to because I know I can handle it," Testaverde said. "I've been around a long time and I've been blamed for a lot of things in my career. I know how to shake things off and not let it take away from preparing for the next game."

Testaverde's performance on Sunday in the Browns' 32-0 victory over the Arizona Cardinals was far from impressive, but nonetheless it was better than the first two games.

In the Browns' first two games, Testaverde was intercepted twice in a win at Cincinnati and four times in a loss to Pittsburgh. But against Buddy Ryan's top-rated defense, Testaverde completed 17 of 27 passes for 248 yards with two touchdowns and one interception.

"I knew I was under a lot of pressure in [the Arizona] game," he said. "We were playing against the No. 1 defense in the league and I thought about it a lot during the week. Plus, I wasn't happy with my performance against the Steelers the week before and I knew I had to come in and play better and not let down my teammates."

With Sunday's performance, Testaverde was able to raise his quarterback rating from a dismal 43.1 which was last in the AFC to a more respectable 60.2.

"I didn't try to kid myself," Testaverde said. "I knew I played a bad game [against Pittsburgh]. But I didn't let it distract me from preparing for this week's game. I studied hard, prepared hard and I tried to play a smart game. I knew I couldn't make the mistakes I made last week."

Sanders to start against Saints

by Dennis Georgatos
The Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. -- The defensive line was overhauled. There's an entirely new corps of linebackers, and with the addition of Deion Sanders, change is in store for the San Francisco 49ers' secondary.

Coach George Seifert said Monday that Sanders would make his first start for the 49ers on Sunday against the New Orleans Saints.

One of the league's top cornerbacks, Sanders joined San Francisco last week as a free agent and made his debut in a reserve role during Sunday's 34-19 win over the Los Angeles Rams. He was in for 31 plays, entering primarily as the nickel back and helping to keep Rams receiver Flipper Anderson without a reception.

"He played better than I would have expected," Seifert said of Sanders, whose last football outing was the Pro Bowl in February.

But starting Sanders is only half of the decision. The remaining part involves which starter will be bumped from the lineup to make room for the newcomer.

"Everybody's aware there's basically two scenarios that could take place," San Francisco coach George Seifert said. "One is he'll replace [left cornerback] Eric Davis. The other is he'll replace [free safety] Dana Hall. One of those two situations will take place."

A decision is expected by Wednesday.

Sanders, a three-time Pro Bowler in five seasons with Atlanta, can play either left or right cornerback. So, either he replaces Davis directly or becomes the numerical replacement for Hall by taking over at right corner for Merton Hanks, who then would shift to free safety to replace Hall.

Hall lost the free safety job to Hanks last season, but reclaimed it when Hanks shifted to right corner to fill the gap from the free-agency loss of Don Griffin.

The dilemma for the 49ers is both Davis and Hall have played well. Each has 13 tackles, tied for fourth on the team.

Hall, the club's No. 1 pick in 1992, seems to be coming around after two disappointing seasons. He defended a potential touchdown pass and made a drive-stopping tackle in the loss to Kansas City two weeks ago.

"I feel confident I've done the job to this point," Hall said. "Now it's going to be a coach's decision."

Davis, in his third year as a starter, had one of his best games Sunday, registering six tackles, knocking down two passes and recovering a fumble against the Rams.

"George hasn't said anything," Davis said. "I imagine something will be said soon, because something has to be said soon. I've always said in the NFL, jobs aren't won or lost."

Cooper won't bet on Buckeye victory

by Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio -- Obviously, Ohio State coach John Cooper isn't a betting man.

Installed as heavy favorites over Houston Saturday, his 20th-ranked Buckeyes run the risk of winning big but still not pleasing those wagering on the game. But that's OK with Cooper.

"I don't worry about those people who bet the point spread," he said at his weekly news conference Tuesday. "I think you'd have to be a village idiot to bet on any kind of game, particularly college football games with the way parity is in college football right now."

Village idiots take note: the Buckeyes are favored by 37 points.

The betting line is a tribute to the 2-1 Buckeyes as much as it is a shot at the Cougars, winless in three lopsided starts.

Consider that Houston:

Has yet to score in the first three quarters of any of its games. The Cougars have been pummeled by a combined 83-20 score by Kansas, Louisiana Tech and Missouri. Just five years ago, Houston had both Heisman Trophy quarterback Andre Ware and record-setting David Klingler on its roster, and you needed a calculator to total up the touchdown passes.

Was outstruck by those three opponents, 802-179.

Will start three freshmen and have nine others on the second team. Ohio State has two All-Americans (Korey Stringer and Joey Galloway) on offense; the Cougars have eight freshmen on defense.

Got out of a scheduled game with the University of Cincinnati, which would have paid the Cougar athletic department $100,000, to play Ohio State. The buyout cost $75,000, but the athletic department will receive $400,000 to send its football team out before 90,000 partisan fans at Ohio Stadium.

Houston coach Kim Helton didn't sound as though he was filled with confidence.

"Right now, everyone has pretty much had their way with us physically," he said in a conference call. Of the Buckeyes he said, "Their defensive unit looks like a pro football team."

"Right now, we're not very good and some of the people we're playing are pretty good," he said, even though Houston's three opponents are 1-5 in other games.

Yet Helton said it was an advantage to be such an underdog because all the pressure is on Ohio State. He also said his team isn't playing for a moral victory.

Asked how his team would measure progress, he said, "I think progress would be to beat Ohio State."

"We're more concerned about things that we can control," Cooper said.

BG rugby squad flies past Dayton

by Carl Larriccia
The BG News

Before a screaming mob of more than 500 rabid rugby fans, the Bowling Green rugby team defeated the University of Dayton three times on the Flyers' home field.

The Falcons won 29-7, 27-0 and 24-5 to tie Kent State for the top spot in the Ohio Collegiate Rugby Conference standings.

"Physically, we played the best game of the season so far," head coach Roger Mazzarella said. "The guys thumped everything that had a blue jersey on. We literally intimidated Dayton into giving us our first score."

Captain Brian Keefe played a major part in taking Dayton's large crowd out of the game.

Five minutes into the match Keefe up-ended Dayton prop Bill O'Malley and forced a fumble. Keefe pounced on the loose ball and raced 55 yards untouched for BG's first try.

"A big crowd can work both ways," Keefe said. "We went into the game vowing to make sure that they didn't have anything to cheer about."

"Keefe's hit was just typical of what the entire squad was doing," BG eight-man Dan Kelley said. "Anyone wearing blue and carrying the ball didn't go very far before getting knocked down."

Keefe's try was quickly followed by another, this time from fullback Jeff Wagner. With Dayton's defense closing off the inside lanes, center Gary Sadowski hit a streaking Wagner with a long pass. Wagner capped off the play by racing 78 yards for the score. After Paul Tod's conversion, the Flyers trailed 12-0.

After Wagner's try the Falcons offense hit a dry spell.

"We just seemed to go into hibernation," Mazzarella said.

"Except for Dayton's try, we were still working hard on defense, but for about a half hour we stunk the place up on offense."

After a Dayton score, the Falcons offense kicked into high gear.

"Physically, we played the best game so far of the season. The guys thumped everything that had a blue jersey on. We literally intimidated Dayton into giving us our first score."

Roger Mazzarella
BG head coach

With the score 12-7 in BG's favor the Falcons reeled off the next 17 points to put the game out of reach.

Included in the scoring barrage was Jeff Roman's first career score. After a long gain by Tod, Roman dragged three defenders into the end zone for the try.

The Falcons had control throughout the second match, cruising to an easy 27-0 win. The Falcons finished off the night with another easy win to improve their record to 6-2-1.

"They [BG] have the forwards to go with their usual bunch of excellent backs," Dayton captain Jeff Searls said. "I wish them luck."

The Falcons take on league-leading Kent State this weekend. Last spring the Flashes broke a 21-year, 73-game losing streak to BG.

"I'm not very happy that the Kent thing ended on my match," Mazzarella said.

Hurricanes dominated by Jones'

by Steven Wine
The Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. -- Stop Jones, and you've stopped the Miami Hurricanes.

The Hurricanes have seven players named Jones on their squad, which can lead to confusion for coaches, opponents and broadcasters.

"The toughest thing is on a pass," said Sonny Hirsch, the Hurricanes' play-by-play announcer. "Instead of saying, 'It's a pass to Jones,' I have to say, 'It's a pass to Chris T. Jones.' It drives you nuts. It's tough keeping up with the Joneses."

Chris T. Jones, No. 85, is a senior wide receiver. Chris C. Jones, No. 84, is a freshman tight end.

The sixth-ranked Hurricanes also have cornerbacks Carlos and Aaron Jones, center K.C. Jones, fullback Larry Jones and tailback Trent Jones.

The Joneses hail from Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee, as well as Florida. None is related.

"When you say 'Jones!' they all turn and look," said Charlie Williams, who coaches the Hurricanes' wide receivers. "You have to specify; they get mad if you don't. They'll say, 'Who you talking to?'"

Chris T. says each Jones has a nickname, which reduces confusion. Teammates call him "Cobra," rather than "Jones."

Mix-ups are inevitable -- particular involving Chris T. and Chris C.

"Sometimes I get his mail," Chris T. said. "I opened it and read it one time when he got a letter from his honey."

The Hurricanes could use more players named Irvin, Maryland and Kosar. But Jones, Jones, Jones, Jones, Jones and Jones have plenty of talent. Some of them might even play someday for Atlanta Falcons coach June Jones or Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones.

Chris T. Jones leads the Hurricanes (2-0) with 10 receptions, including two for touchdowns. Trent Jones also has a touchdown reception. Larry Jones was the most valuable player in the 1992 Orange Bowl. K.C. Jones anchors a fine offensive line. Carlos Jones is a starting cornerback and has an interception. Aaron Jones is his backup. Chris C. Jones has the potential to become a star.

"It's a damned good group of athletes," coach Williams said.

In the history of the Hurricanes, they've had only 16 Joneses. Seven on one roster might be an NCAA record.

Carroll to buy race course

by The Associated Press

COVINGTON, Ky. -- Turfway Park owner Jerry Carroll has reached an agreement to buy another Cincinnati-area horse racing track, The Kentucky Post reported Tuesday.

Carroll said the agreement to buy River Downs Race Course could be finalized in two to three days.

Terms were not disclosed, but Carroll said last week he had considered offering $20 million to $30 million.

"We're excited about the possibility to get in there, but it's not a done deal yet," Carroll told the newspaper.

River Downs general manager

Jack Hanessian, one of the 20 partners who own the track just east of Cincinnati, would not confirm that an agreement had been reached.

"There's no change in our status," he said.

Carroll said the agreement was reached after a three-hour meeting Monday at Turfway Park in Florence.

Faulty propane heater cause of Gerulaitis' tragic death

by Pat Milton
The Associated Press

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Vitas Gerulaitis died from carbon monoxide poisoning caused by fumes from a faulty propane heater, authorities said today.

Tests showed that "between 72 and 77 percent of his blood was saturated with carbon monoxide extremely, extremely high levels," said Norma Dill, assistant to the Suffolk County chief medical examiner.

On Monday night police said that the 40-year-old former tennis star appeared to have been killed by fumes which seeped into the heating and air conditioning system of a friend's home.

Gerulaitis' body was found Sunday.

The carbon monoxide was an unexpected discovery in the autopsy, according to a source who spoke on the condition of anonymity, and said, "It was extremely puzzling, since they thought what they were dealing with was an individual who died of natural causes or a drug overdose, given the individual's history."

When a servant entered the cottage Sunday afternoon, the television was on and Gerulaitis was still wearing clothes he'd worn Saturday morning at a charity tennis clinic, the source said.

Police said they did not know whether Gerulaitis was asleep when fumes swept through the house. He was alone in the cottage of an oceanfront estate in this affluent Long Island town.

Police said there were no signs of drugs or crime.

Once one of the world's top players, Gerulaitis' pursuit of the fast lane made him as much a personality off the courts as on the shaved lawns of Wimbledon. He himself had conceded that drugs and long nights eventually halted a career that had won him a place among the tennis elite.

Gerulaitis played his last match Wednesday night in Seattle on the Champions Tour, a circuit for men 35 and over. He withdrew from the event the next day because of a bad back.

Hobson fired by Red Sox

by Howard Ulman
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Butch Hobson was fired Tuesday as manager of the Boston Red Sox after three losing seasons.

"I believed in my heart that this day would never happen," Hobson said during a news conference at Fenway Park. "I'm not going to burn any bridges. When new faces come in, they want to bring in new faces, I knew that."

Speculation on Hobson's future had intensified when Dan Duquette became general manager last Jan. 27 after serving in that capacity with the Montreal Expos. It increased when the Red Sox faltered after getting off to a strong start this year.

Duquette did not name a successor to Hobson. He said he was considering a list of candidates with more experience at the major league level, "an experienced veteran baseball man."

"Butch gave his best efforts for the last three years. Are we holding him responsible for everything with the club? The answer to that is no," Duquette said.

The Red Sox were 54-61 in the strike-shortened 1994 season, 17 games out of first place in the AL East. His record since taking the job in 1992 was 207-232.

another job with the Red Sox. He had flown to Boston from Alabama after receiving a call from Duquette on Monday night.

"I apologize for my attire -- I didn't know this was going to happen," said Hobson.

He thanked Jean Yawkey, the late Red Sox owner, general partner John Harrington, former general manager Lou Gorman and former owner Haywood Sullivan for the opportunity to manage. "My head's up because I'm proud of what I accomplished here. My head's up because I'm a good person," Hobson said. "Good things happen to good people and good things will happen to me."

In Hobson's first season as manager, Boston finished last in the AL East with a 73-89 record. The Red Sox were in the division race for much of the 1993 season.

Lions return to 1935 form

by Denne H. Freeman

IRVING, Texas — The Detroit Lions might want to play in their 1935 jerseys every week. The Dallas Cowboys ought to burn their 1960 version.

On "throwbacks" weekend, the Lions played Monday night in the uniforms of the 1935 NFL champions. The Cowboys competed in the uniforms of an expansion team that didn't win a game.

The Lions ended the defending Super Bowl champions' 10-game winning streak with a 20-17 victory on a 44-yard field goal by Jason Hanson with 27 seconds left in overtime.

"We may never come out of these uniforms at all," Detroit coach Wayne Fontes said. "We seem to play well in these."

Dallas was impressed with the 1935 — or rather, the 1994 — Lions.

"We know that when teams come in to play us, they are going to play their best," Dallas safety James Washington said. "Anything can happen. When teams play us, they play like it is their Super Bowl."

Hanson had two late field-goal attempts blocked by Leon Lett, but still managed the game-winner.

"After all those kicks, I'm glad one of them went in," Hanson said. "I thought I hit a 52-yarder perfect, but Lett blocked it. I just thank the team for giving me all the chances."

The Cowboys thought Hanson would miss again.

"I thought he would miss it the way he had been kicking," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer, who felt the sting of his first NFL loss. "Sometimes the best team doesn't win. Sometimes you make too many mistakes."

Detroit quarterback Scott Mitchell said the win should help Detroit's confidence.

"This was a big game, and a big win," Mitchell said. "If we plan to get where we want to be, this is the type of game that we have to win. We have to prove that we can play with great teams like Dallas. We didn't win the Super Bowl. But it was a big win for the third game of the season."

It was the first loss for the Super Bowl champions since last Thanksgiving when a blunder by Lett allowed the Miami Dolphins to win in the snow at Texas Stadium. Lett touched a bouncing ball after a blocked field goal. The Dolphins recovered and kicked the winning field goal.

Hanson made his second overtime field goal of the season. He had a 37-yarder against Atlanta in the season-opener.

Bengals linebacker fined

by The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Backup linebacker Eric Shaw will be docked more than $10,000 in pay because the Cincinnati Bengals suspended him for Sunday's game against the Houston Oilers for conduct detrimental to the team.

Shaw, a 12th-round draft pick from Louisiana Tech in 1992, did not return a phone call to comment Tuesday. He has not been in trouble with the Bengals before.

Bengals general manager Mike Brown said Shaw was stopped by Cincinnati police Saturday night or early Sunday morning for driving under the influence of alcohol and speeding. Shaw's 23rd birthday was Saturday.

Shaw, a second-string linebacker and special teams player, played Sunday in the Bengals' 31-28 loss to the New England Patriots.

A player can be fined as much as one week's pay and suspended without pay for up to four weeks.
